The one to one meetings with the suppliers and manufacturers were a very valuable experience outside the everyday office life and are not comparable with ordinary business appointments. For a designer, the lack of time is the main reason why meetings are normally not as productive as they could be. Usually meetings with the suppliers focus only on the project in line or general product information updates, the real potential for two businesses to develop new solutions and products remains unused. At HI DESIGN various exciting products were exhibited which normally go unseen. Business contacts can be intensified on a much more personal level since the time frame allows for prime time conversations which cannot be replaced by any other ordinary phone call.
